Main Findings of 2015/16:

- The majority of police officers had positive views of Ombudsman staff:
 - 89% felt they were treated with respect,
 - 80% felt they were treated fairly,
 - 90% felt staff were easy to understand, and
 - 77% thought staff were knowledgeable.
- Officers were more satisfied with the explanation of the process, the manner in which they were treated and the clarity of the correspondence than for other aspects of the complaints process.
- Almost eight out of ten officers (79%) felt their complaint was dealt with independently.
- Almost half of officers (48%) stated that they were satisfied with how the Office handled their complaint.
- Three fifths of officers (60%) felt that the police complaints system makes the police more accountable.

Introduction

This is an Official Statistics publication. Official Statistics are produced to high professional standards set out in the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. They undergo regular validation checks to ensure that they meet customer needs. They are produced free from any political interference.

The Office of the Police Ombudsman for Northern Ireland (the Office) was set up by the Police (Northern Ireland) Act 1998 in order to provide an independent system for investigating complaints against the police in Northern Ireland. The Police Ombudsman is committed to providing an independent and impartial investigation process of the highest quality, which is timely and secures the confidence of both the public and police.

This report presents the findings from the Police Officer Satisfaction Survey. It includes information collected from officers who were subject of an investigation which was subsequently closed during 2015/16 and compares the findings to results obtained for 2014/15¹.

A total of 1,114 officers were emailed a questionnaire and 461 questionnaires were returned. This represents a response rate of 41%.

¹ This is the second year that the police officer satisfaction survey was carried out electronically; therefore comparisons can only be made with 2014/15.

Results

Perception of Ombudsman staff

Police officers were asked if they spoke to a member of staff and, if they had, how staff had appeared to them in relation to a number of characteristics. In 2015/16, 86% of respondents said that they had spoken to a member of staff and of these:

- 89% felt they were treated with respect,
- 80% felt they were treated fairly,
- 90% felt staff were easy to understand and
- 77% felt staff were knowledgeable (Figure 1, Tables 1 – 4).

Results show that the views of police officers, with respect to Ombudsman staff, have remained similar over the last two years.

Information from this survey is used by the Office to measure compliance against one of the Office's key performance indicators which deals with maintaining impartiality and independence in dealing with complaints. The Office aims:

'To maintain a level of at least 70% of police officers subject of investigation to feel that they have been dealt with fairly by the Office.'

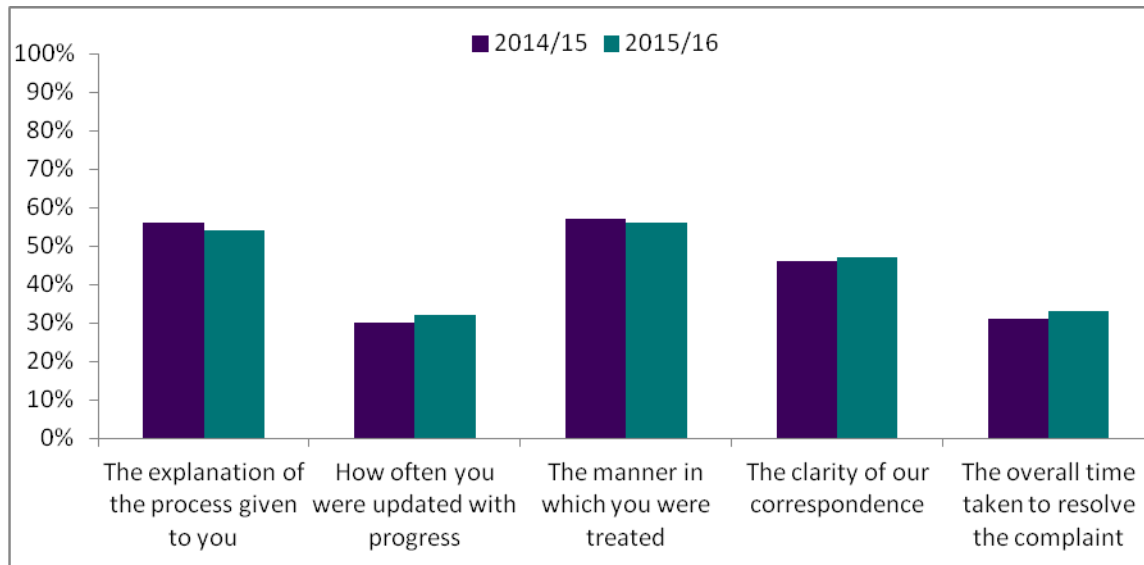

Results from this year's survey show that the Office met and exceeded this target with 80% of officers feeling they were dealt with fairly.

Level of satisfaction with aspects of the complaints process

In 2015/16, a larger proportion of officers were satisfied with the explanation of the process, the manner in which they were treated and the clarity of the correspondence than with the frequency of progress updates and the overall time taken to resolve the complaint.

These findings are similar to those reported last year (Figure 2, Tables 5 - 9).

Independence, Satisfaction and Accountability

In 2015/16:

- Nearly four out of five officers (79%) felt that the Police Ombudsman's Office dealt with their complaint independently.
- Almost half of the officers (48%) who responded to the survey were satisfied with how the Office handled their complaint. A further 26% of officers were dissatisfied and 26% of officers were neither satisfied nor dissatisfied.
- Three fifths of officers (60%) felt that the police complaints system makes the police more accountable.

With regards to independence, overall satisfaction and accountability, the views of police officers have remained virtually unchanged compared with last year (Figure 3, Tables 10 – 12).

Appendix 2: Notes to readers

The survey:

In 2014/15, the Office began looking at ways of defining the service it intended to deliver to police officers and how best to measure their attitudes to the service received. It was decided that a more suitable way of measuring the attitudes of police officers, with respect to the service they received from the Office, was to electronically survey those officers who had been the subject of an investigation which was subsequently closed during that reporting year².

The identity of the officers surveyed at the end of 2015/16 was extracted from the Office's Case handling System (CHS). Although some officers had more than one complaint closed during the year, they were asked to complete the survey only once.

This is the second year that the survey has been carried out in this way. Police Service of Northern Ireland (PSNI) software was used to carry out the survey and the Statistics Branch within the PSNI facilitated this on our behalf.

Data use:

The data collected are used by the Office to monitor and evaluate the service provided to those police officers who have been subject to a complaint and identify any issues that arise in a timely manner. This allows the Office to fulfil its statutory duty to secure the confidence of the police in the complaints handling process.

The data are also used by this Office to comply with the key performance indicator whereby the Office aims to:

'Maintain a level of at least 70% of police officers subject of investigation to feel that they have been dealt with fairly by the office³'.

² Prior to 2014/15, police officers who had been the subject of an investigation received a paper survey from the Office.

³ Eighty percent achievement in 2015/16.
